An NEH Virtual Summer Institute for Middle and High School Teachers

The American Social History Project/Center for Media and Learning at the Graduate Center, City University of New York will host a National Endowment for the Humanities institute in Summer 2022 for 30 middle and high school teachers to study LGBTQ+ Histories of the United States. During this remote institute, participants will view presentations by and interact with noted scholars, teachers, and archivists, as well as their colleagues, as they discuss approaches to incorporating LGBTQ+ history into their classes. In addition, they will participate in "behind the scenes" virtual sessions with curators and staff at the Lesbian Herstory Archives, Leslie Lohman Museum, and New York Public Library. Find more info here.

Any views, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed in this program do not necessarily represent those of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The National Endowment for the Humanities: Democracy demands wisdom.